Andy Ferren is an intellectual property lawyer and business counselor. Clients rely on him for legal and practical business guidance in matters involving intellectual property, commercial transactions, general corporate issues, and nonprofit operations and compliance.

His transactional practice includes licensing, technology transfer, joint ventures, collaboration agreements, purchase and sale agreements, e-commerce agreements, and other transactions involving intellectual property assets. He is particularly adept at working with clients and their business partners to negotiate and craft agreements that accurately capture the parties' intent and achieve their business objectives.

Andy also helps clients to protect and manage their trademarks, copyrights, trade secrets, and other intellectual property in the U.S. and other markets through a variety of registration, enforcement, and defense efforts. He works with these clients to develop and execute strategies that maximize the value of their intellectual property assets.

The clients he serves include retailers, real estate developers, private equity funds, technology companies, and individuals. In advising these clients, Andy routinely consults with C-level managers, marketing personnel, and information technology specialists.

Andy also devotes a substantial portion of his time to advising nonprofit organizations. He helps such clients to meet their goals while complying with the rules that govern their tax-exempt status. In these client relationships, Andy is as much a business advisor as a legal advisor. When the firm's nonprofit clients collaborate with for-profit businesses, Andy often helps to educate both sides of the deal about how the transaction can be legally structured. Although he advises many of these non-profit clients on a pro bono basis, he takes pride in doing the same sophisticated work for them that he does for the firm's other clients and in providing the same level of quality and responsiveness that other clients enjoy.

Purchasers Software Development, Customization, and Licensing Transactions

Represent a wide range of purchasers in connection with software development, customization, and licensing transactions to support their business operations. Recent transactions have included the acquisition of rights to use cloud-based software and services for purposes such as accounting systems, telecommunication systems, investment management systems, tenant management systems, and web sites and e-commerce. Many of these transactions require particular sensitivity to the protection of personally identifiable information of the client and its customers and the vendor's compliance with applicable data protection laws.

Owners and Managers of Real Estate in Agreements for Artwork

Represent owners and managers of real estate in agreements to commission, license, or borrow public art, including original sculptures, murals, and other two- and three-dimensional artworks. Recent transactions have involved artworks installed in the Fenway, Seaport, and Back Bay districts of Boston and installations in three different locations on Boston's Greenway.

Women's Apparel Company Intellectual Property Issues

Represented a women's apparel company in brand protection, copyright advice, category licensing, its e-commerce fulfillment agreement, and the eventual sale of its intellectual property and other assets. The sale and license transactions were with one of the client's licensees, which had purchased the client's debt and was able to use that control as leverage in negotiations. Nonetheless, the Goulston & Storrs team was able to secure licenses back from the purchaser and save the client's core business.

International Non-Profit Organization Intellectual Property Agreements

Represented an international non-profit organization in a regional intellectual property ownership and licensing agreement with another international non-profit. The project required establishing the scope of certain jointly owned rights based on collaborative work in one country and negotiating ground rules for each party to make independent use of that intellectual property and modified versions thereof in other territories.

Hotel Negotiation and Documentation of Agreements

Represented a hotel owned by a multinational financial services company in negotiating and documenting the hotel's acquisition of equipment, computer software, and related services for a "smart" parking garage system. The project required navigating the parent company's complex procurement process. Particular attention was paid to open source software licensing, vendor personnel screening, and data security compliance because the parking system vendor outsourced certain of its services to overseas subcontractors and because the parking system could interface with the parent company's computer systems.

Architectural Trade Association Transactions for Annual Trade Show

Represented an architectural trade association in a series of transactions concerning its annual trade show, including the buyout of a co-owner, the co-location of its show with another industry trade show, and the ultimate sale of its show to a global trade show owner and operator. These matters required attention to the particular concerns of a 501(c)(6) tax-exempt organization and involved a variety of brand protection issues.
