

Construction Litigation

The Goulston & Storrs Construction Litigation group is well-recognized in the construction industry for its diverse group of clients and effective approach to dispute resolution, catastrophic event investigation, insurance coverage analysis and litigation. Complemented by the firm's Real Estate Construction team's transactional skills, our attorneys have in depth experience dealing with a wide range of matters and bring to the task a diverse array of technical and legal skills.

Our Construction Litigation group counsels both public and private owners, design professionals, large and medium sized contractors and industry suppliers. These clients include public transportation authorities, shopping center developers and owners, large commercial and office building developers and owners, tenants, and regional, local and national-scale contractors.

Goulston & Storrs provides a full range of services to clients related to construction dispute resolution, with special emphasis on early intervention to contain and manage disputes before they develop into costly arbitration or litigation. If litigation is unavoidable, Goulston & Storrs is prepared to prosecute claims and maintain defenses in an aggressive manner using claim investigation, document control, working with specialized industry experts and technological aids with maximum effectiveness.
