Emily Berlin is a trusts and estates attorney who works with clients on matters related to estate planning, estate administration, and trust administration.

As part of her practice, Emily helps clients understand and plan given estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax considerations, balancing those considerations against their and their families' other objectives. She also advises individuals who are serving in fiduciary capacities, including as personal representatives and trustees.

Prior to joining Goulston & Storrs, Emily served as a law clerk to the Honorable David A. Lowy of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.
