George Evans is a real estate attorney who represents owners, operators, developers, borrowers, investors, lenders, landlords, and tenants.

George works closely with clients to help them achieve their objectives whether they are acquiring, financing, investing in, selling, or leasing multifamily, office, or hospitality assets across the United States.

In doing so, George negotiates and structures joint ventures for the acquisition or repositioning of properties. He also handles all aspects of drafting, negotiating, and filing commercial condominium documents.

George has experience advising publicly traded REITs on securities law matters as well.

Upscale Food Halls—On Trend and On The Rise

The growth of high-end food halls is taking off around the country as consumers seek fast, fresh, high-quality, chef-driven meals with a local touch, and as landlords seek to cash in on the continued growth of fast-casual dining. These...

Trending Topic of Interest

Because of his broad work with real estate owners and operators throughout the country, George is keenly alert to trends affecting the real estate industry. One interesting trend George is following closely is how developers are acquiring land in markets with rapidly increasing land costs.

What he sees is an increase in real estate developers engaging in joint ventures with current land owners who have a low cost basis in their properties. The two partners share a common goal to redevelop a particular property, and the joint venture is able to obtain financing more efficiently than the developer could alone.

George is monitoring this interesting new pathway to property acquisition, redevelopment and ultimate improvement.
