Representative Matters

Representation in Connection with an Alleged Breach of Lease Among Other Issues Related to Daily Operations

Representation of an affiliate of WS Development in connection with a lawsuit against ONE Group Hospitality, Inc. and one of its "STK" branded restaurant companies alleging breach of a lease and breach of guarantee for a new two-story restaurant space at the C Block of Seaport Square, in Boston. The case involves alleged breach of lease among other issues related to daily operations.

Representation of Automobile Dealerships in Defense of Multiple Class Actions

Representation of a privately-owned group of 55 automobile dealerships in defense of three class actions alleging widespread violations of wage and hour laws. These actions feature a novel effort to sue related businesses as a single entity under Massachusetts law, as well as a novel interpretation of various state minimum wage and overtime regulations.

Pro Bono

Kaileigh is very committed to helping those who cannot gain access to legal representation on their own. She works closely with many of the firm's pro bono clients including Haley House, International Refugee Assistance Project (IRAP), Kids in need of Defense (KIND) and the Lawyers Clearing House. She assists individuals with a range of immigration and asylum matters, as well as participating in legal clinics for the homeless to resolve matters related to rents and evictions.

Kaileigh is especially committed to and involved with the Boston Youth Sanctuary. As an Ambassador to the Board of Directors, she works on a range of matters assisting kids who have experienced trauma in their lives. Before going to law school, Kaileigh was the organization's first employee and helped to establish a program that provides safe and nurturing environments where at-risk youth are encouraged to express themselves positively and gain sustainable skills for a lifetime of success.
