Leah Segal is a tax lawyer who counsels clients in a wide range of domestic and cross-border transactions, including mergers and acquisitions, financings, offerings, and restructurings. Her practice includes advising clients on the tax aspects of various commercial real estate transactions, including joint ventures, acquisitions and dispositions, and tax credit deals. Her clients include privately held and publicly traded companies, family office investors, REITs and REMICs. She has experience representing charitable and other tax-exempt organizations in obtaining and maintaining tax-exempt status, as well as navigating ongoing governance and compliance issues. Leah also assists clients with charitable planning and has advised clients regarding tax implications of litigation.

Prior to joining Goulston & Storrs, Leah was an associate at an Am Law Top 50 U.S. law firm. She holds a J.D. from Boston University School of Law, where she served as executive editor for the Boston University Law Review, and an A.B. from Brown University.
