

New E-Discovery Rules Bring Changes, Challenges and Cutting Edge Discovery Issues to Trust and Estate Litigation

April 25, 2014

T&E practitioners may think that the new Massachusetts rules governing electronically stored information (“ESI”) do not apply to their practice, but they would be wrong. The new rules do apply and likely will bring big changes to T&E litigation. Mark Swirbalus and Marshall Senterfitt, both of Goulston & Storrs' Probate and Fiduciary Litigation Group, explain in a recent post to the Boston Bar Association's Trusts and Estates Section blog.
