Nora Saunders is an attorney in the firm’s litigation group. Nora supports the firm’s litigation team with a full range of trial preparation including due diligence, legal research, discovery, and drafting memoranda and legal briefs.

While in the evening program of law school and prior to joining Goulston & Storrs, Nora was a litigation paralegal at a boutique litigation firm for three years. In this role, Nora was involved in all aspects of litigation support and case management. Nora’s legal industry experience also includes working on the forensic investigative side of discovery relative to a prominent Boston area murder trial. While in law school, Nora held the role of Articles Editor for the Suffolk University Law Review.

Nora also has years of cumulative experience in the financial services industry, specifically in regulatory compliance, wealth planning, and sports and entertainment venture capitalism. Prior to beginning her legal career, Nora was an associate investment consultant for an independent tax organization focusing on high-net-worth wealth management.
