

In Unanimous Ruling, Supreme Court Takes Aim at NCAA's 'Amateurism' Model

June 21, 2021

Chronicle of Higher Education

Eric Kelderman

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously on Monday that limits on education-related benefits for college athletes violate federal antitrust laws. The opinion, written by Justice Neil M. Gorsuch, is seen as a victory for athletes' rights and a strong rebuke of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's argument that increasing benefits for athletes will undermine what it says is the enterprise's signature appeal — that its athletes are considered unpaid amateurs.

Click here for more.