

Middle market companies press the reset button on growth

August 30, 2021

Crain's New York Business

---

The economy has opened up again for middle market companies, and business is booming in many sectors. The surge of the delta variant, however, is requiring many midsize firms in the city to stay flexible in their approaches to everything from real estate to risk management.

Goulston & Storrs director Ling Kong spoke with Crain's New York Business to provide insight on some of the key issues affecting middle market companies in the city these days.

Read the full article here.