

Victims' Son Can Access Murder's Spendthrift Trust

October 29, 2020

Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly

Eric T. Berkman

"The son of murder victims could reach the assets of an irrevocable spendthrift trust that the parents' now-deceased killer had created with himself as beneficiary, the Supreme Judicial Court has ruled in response to a certified question from the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals."

Mark Swirbalus comments on this case, reminding readers that trusts can't always be kept from creditors, even if a spendthrift provision is included.

Read the full article.