

Regulatory

Goulston & Storrs attorneys serve the full range of legal and strategic needs of clients navigating regulatory requirements at the local, state, regional and national levels. Our clients look to us for help in interacting with governmental agencies, understanding the impact of proposed or new regulations, identifying the scope of regulatory requirements applicable to their businesses, strategizing on available programs and resources, and coordinating customized approaches to working with the government. We represent clients before governmental agencies across multiple industries including agriculture, banking, defense, education, energy, environmental, finance, health and human services, housing, labor, security, technology and transportation.

Our firm's deep and broad experience in housing, sustainable development, transportation, tax, international trade and investment, export controls, intellectual property, economic development and commercial matters uniquely positions us as effective advisors and advocates. Our approach is to be proactive, always looking ahead to upcoming regulatory changes, understanding the interplay of statutory initiatives and policy, identifying the best available opportunities and offering insight for our clients as they work toward their long-term goals. We pride ourselves on effectively and efficiently guiding our clients through the often complex maze of regulatory requirements.
